

JAPANESE GUNS SINK SOVIET BOAT WITH HEAVY LOSSES

Reports State Vessel Was Bombarded by Defenders of Amur River

CAUSES BIG SENSATION

Incident Certain to Arouse
New Tension Between Russia and Japan

By International News Service
HSINKING, MANCHUKUO, June 30.—Guns of Japanese-Manchukuo forces at Seennusu Islands in the Amur River, have sunk a Soviet gunboat with heavy loss of life, it was reported unofficially here today.

Reports here stated the vessel was bombarded by Japanese-Manchukuo "defenders" of the Amur River.

Other advices here said reports of the ship's sinking had reached Tokyo, where the incident caused a major sensation. At the same time, certain to arouse new tension between Soviet Russia and Japan and perhaps bring the Far East to the brink of a new explosion followed announcement by the Embassy in Moscow that the U. S. S. R. and Japan had agreed to withdraw their forces from the Seennusu Islands.

The Amur River marks the boundary between Siberia and Manchukuo in that region.

Sovereignty of the island has been disputed by Russia on one side and Japan and Manchukuo on the other.

Launch Movement For Protection of Workers

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., June 30.—(INS)—Incensed over the dynamiting of the main water lines of the Cambria mills of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, anti-CIO groups here today launched a nationwide movement for "protection of the right to work for all loyal Americans who want to work."

Three leaders of the strike at the Bethlehem Steel plant were warned by Mayor Daniel J. Shields to leave the city because, he said, he could no longer be responsible for their safety. The Mayor's action was endorsed by a special meeting of city council.

Francis C. Martin, chairman of the Johnstown Citizens Committee, telegraphed invitations to civic organizations in the seven states affected by the current steel strike requesting them to attend a meeting here. He said in his telegram the Citizens Committee and its allied steel workers committee were formed June 19 to protest Gov. George H. Earle's action in declaring martial law, closing the mills and shutting off a $500,000 weekly payroll.

Mayor Shields' orders were directed at James Mark, sub-regional director of the CIO and also district president of the United Mine Workers; C. W. Jones, vice-president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and H. M. VanZant, also a brotherhood leader. Police were unable to find VanZant but Mark and Jones were brought before the special council meeting where they heard the mayor request them to leave the city.

All In Readiness For Roosevelt-DuPont Wedding

By George Durno
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
WILMINGTON, Del., June 30.—(INS)—All was in readiness for the wedding at five o'clock this afternoon of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., and Ethel duPont which will forge a blood tie between two of the nation's most famous, and politically hostile families.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt were taking an early train up from Washington to watch their third son take the attractive blonde daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene duPont down the aisle of the rustic duPont family church near Greenville, Del.

There was earnest agreement by both families that political philosophies be put aside for the day while the romance that has delighted the American imagination comes to its proper culmination.

"This is their day," said the elders of the Roosevelt and duPont clans.

To the best of his ability, the President was attempting to divorce himself temporarily from his official position and assume the more inconspicuous role of the groom's father.

He and Mrs. Roosevelt will reach Wilmington at noon and be whisked immediately to "Owls Nest" at Greenville, home of the bride's family, to join in a private luncheon for the two families.

Thereafter, seeking to divert the spotlight to his 22-year-old son and Miss duPont, who is one year younger, the President planned to retire to his special train "to dress for the wedding." He will make no further appearance until just time to start for the church.

Raps Those Who Fail To Shoulder Responsibility

Pittsburgh, June 30.—"We shall never have law and order in America until those who are responsible for the administration of their nation take their responsibility seriously," U. S. Senator James J. Davis, Republican, asserted at a GOP rally at nearby Crafton, last night.

"The people of America have no more use for the destructive radicals than for the operation of the industrial tyrant," Davis said. "We want neither Fascism or Communism in the United States, for either of these factional groups would put democracy to the sword if permitted to do so." The right to do violence, destroy property and kill is not included in the workers' right to strike, Davis said.

TERRY-BECKER NUPTIAL CEREMONY PERFORMED

Rev. Howard Adams, Tacony, Officiates at Wedding in Bensalem Township

TO TRENTON BY PLANE

A wedding was solemnized on the lawn at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Q. Becker, Bensalem Township, Saturday afternoon, at four o'clock, when their daughter, Miss Margaret Elizabeth Becker, became the bride of Millard F. Terry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert R. Terry, Sr., Trevese. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Howard W. Adams, Tacony.

The bride, on the arm of her father, approached the white altar which had as a background flowers and green shrubbery. She wore a gown of white mousseline de soie, with a small Peter Pan collar and a silk lace panel from the neck to the hem line. The sleeves were puffed from the shoulders, and tight-fitting to the wrist. Her veil of tulle was edged with satin, and arranged with a coronet of braided satin. She carried a large shower bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Lawrence W. Terry, as matron of honor, who was gown in a dress of aquamarine mousseline de soie made on princess lines, with large full sleeves to the elbow. The high waistline was accented with yellow ribbon. Her bouquet was yellow African daisies, and she wore a wreath of daisies in her hair.

The best man was Lawrence W. Terry, Churchillville, brother of the bridegroom. The bride's sister, Mrs. Lawrence W. Terry, was married to the bridegroom's brother on June 29, 1935.

Miss Velma Yeagle, Bensalem, a cousin of the bride, played Lohengrin's and Mendelssohn's wedding marches. Miss Charlotte White, Cornwells, also a cousin of the bride, sang "Because" and "I Love You Truly."

The bride's mother was attired in a flowered taffeta, and wore a corsage of talisman roses and baby's breath. The bridegroom's mother was gown in a dress of pink and blue flowered organdy. A corsage of pink roses and baby's breath completed her costume.

The wedding supper was served to 70 guests at the home of the bride's parents. An airplane piloted by Stanley Bowers, Mechanicsville, landed on a field near the bride's home and took the bride and groom to Trenton Airport. They then motored to the shore where they spent the week-end. The latter part of July they will travel through the New England States and Canada.

The bride and groom will make their home at 5329 N. Oakland street, Frankford.

TREASURE HUNTER HAS REACHED WEST INDIES

Michael Cinciosi Engaged In Second Jaunt to Southern Islands

WOMAN IS DIVER

Michael Cinciosi, 323 Grand avenue, who has left for islands in the West Indies group where he will aid in search for sunken and buried treasure, has reached San Juan, Puerto Rico.

This young man who has been so fortunate as to be enabled to accompany parties on this second treasure hunting voyage, in a letter to members of his family yesterday, informed that a two-masted schooner is to be purchased by the party he is accompanying, then sailing to Mayaguez, where deep-sea diving equipment will be loaded. From there the schooner will be headed toward the Island of Mona in the West Indies group, where a base camp will be established.

All search for buried treasure will take place on Mona Island; and from the base camp on Mona the schooner will take the party to San Domingo and other sections where diving operations will be carried out in search of sunken ships which might bear treasure.

This young man, who in April of 1935, left Bristol as a "land-lubber" and returned a few months later with much experience and interesting tales of the sea gained on his first treasure hunt, is much enthused over this second jaunt. In a letter to his parents, brothers and sisters, he states that the party has a very sensitive instrument to be used in searching for treasure.

The party to date consists of five, these being: George Peabody, who aided in planning the expedition which the localite accompanied two years ago; Paul Gagney, Frederick Stork, and a Mrs. Craig, all of New York; and the young Bristolian.

Mrs. Craig is a deep-sea diver, as is also her husband. Both Mr. and Mrs. Craig, it is reported, will dive when work of salvaging the "Lusitania" starts.

Early next week a party of 11 young students from Harvard University are expected to join the party in the West Indies, and aid in the work.

The main purpose of the trip two years ago was to locate treasure, with the idea that at a later date a boat with necessary equipment for reclaiming such might visit the spots.

At that time a sunken pirate galleon was located in the West Indies group, sunk beneath 30 feet of water, evidently being wrecked when it hit the reefs.

MAN DIES OF INJURIES; STRUCK BY AUTOMOBILE

Isaac E. Lippincott, Bath St.,
Succumbs to Fractured
Skull

WAS 68 YEARS OLD

The Bristol man, Isaac E. Lippincott, who was struck by the automobile of Lewis J. Pryor, Fourth avenue, Croydon, late Monday night, died of a fractured skull in the Harriman Hospital yesterday afternoon at 3.45.

Pryor was re-arrested by Constable Joseph Seader and taken before Justice of Peace James Laughlin, at Croydon. A charge of involuntary manslaughter was lodged against Pryor and he was released in $2,000 bail to await the action of the coroner.

Pryor's car struck Lippincott on State Road, just below Cedar avenue, after Lippincott had left a bus and was walking to his employment as watchman for the P. W. A. at the bridge over the Nesheaminy Creek at State Road.

Pryor told Seader that he did not see Lippincott until he was too close to avoid hitting him, despite the fact that he swerved his car.

Lippincott was a native of Bucks County, having been born near Buckingham. He and his family have resided in Bristol for the past 15 years. He was 68 years of age and worked as a painter until a few years ago, when he got out of employment. He had been employed recently by the P. W. A.

ORDERS HUSBAND TO PAY $5 MORE WEEKLY TO SUPPORT FAMILY

William J. Soast, Jr., Lansdale,
Contends That His Wife
Nagged Him

CONTINUE KERNS CASE

Raymond Kerns, Allentown,
Charged With Non-Support
By His Wife

DOYLESTOWN, June 30.—William J. Soast, Jr., a life insurance agent, who lives at the Tremont Hotel, Lansdale, at a hearing on a non-support charge held before President Judge Hiram H. Keller and Judge Calvin S. Boyer, Monday afternoon, was directed by the Court to pay a $15 support order for his wife and daughter who live in Doylestown.

Mrs. Theresa Soast, in her testimony revealed that she and her husband separated May 7, 1936, when she and her 11-year-old daughter came to Doylestown to live with her mother.

She further testified that her husband earned between $50 and $60 a week and that he paid them $10 which was insufficient to maintain them. "We got along fine until he met another woman, and then he told me I could live with him only as a housekeeper," said Mrs. Soast.

Alfred Buoc, who is employed in a County Seat hardware store, testified that he is compelled to assist in the support of his sister and her daughter.

William J. Soast, Jr., 37-year-old defendant, testified that they were married 13 years, but that, after undergoing an operation, his wife nagged him and never was the same after coming home from the hospital.

"To get rid of her nagging I used to stay out late at nights and wait until she had gone to bed," said Soast, who explained to the Court he earned $59 a week, but had to spend $20 in order to take care of the expenses on his car. He sells insurance in the Lansdale, Line Lexington, Tradesville and Colmar sections.

He admitted, upon cross-examination, that he took out a North Wales woman and her mother, but not recently.

He further admitted that he began a divorce action in October, 1936, but dropped it. He denied that he compelled his wife to leave his home and told her he would give her $10 a week to get out.

Miss L. Gertrude Bright, who investigated the case, testified that Mrs. Soast and her daughter would not be able to live on $10 without aid from the family with whom they were living. President Judge Keller directed the defendant to pay an additional $5 to the $10 which he had been paying, and also the costs of prosecution.

The case of Raymond Kerns, Allentown printer, charged with non-support, was continued by President Judge Hiram H. Keller for further investigation.

Lewis Bolnik, superintendent of the American Rescue Workers' Children's Home, near Quakertown, testified that four children, two girls and two boys, have been living at the home for the past six and one-half years.

They are the children of the defendant, who has been separated from his wife since 1931. Up until May 7, the Directors of the Poor of Northampton county paid $60 a month for the support of the four children at the home.

The home was notified May 7 that the Directors of the Poor of Northampton would no longer pay for the support of the children because they understood the father was able to take care of them.

President Judge Keller pointed out that the Directors of the Poor of Northampton county will have to take action against the father, since they are merely living in the Bucks county home and the Bucks county court is not responsible unless they would have been abandoned here.

Judge Calvin S. Boyer was of the opinion that it could have been handled by the Juvenile Court, but not in the Court of Quarter Sessions.

The father was arrested by the superintendent of the home.

The bride, who was dressed in powder blue net with white accessories, was attended by her cousin, Miss Edith Kratz, Perkasie, as bridesmaid. Miss Kratz wore pink organdie. A brother of the groom, Steven Lavendosky, acted as best man.

A wedding dinner at the home of the bride's parents followed the ceremony.

DR. ANGELL'S FAREWELL

President James Rowland Angell of Yale has a reputation as an enlightened scholar and liberal thinker. That won't save him from being the target for a barrage of epithets such as "Tory" from the New Deal's well-disciplined chorus of jobholders and bounty recipients. But Dr. Angell won't care.

And the average American won't care much, either. He will be more interested in what Dr. Angell had to say in his final baccalaureate address at Yale's 236th commencement. Here is part of Dr. Angell's comment on President Roosevelt's official acts: "Certain it is that he has promoted legislation which, if finally enacted, appears to imply the further and complete abdication of Congress, already more than once put into the stultifying position of mere puppets of the Executive. This end is to be achieved through the confiding to innumerable anonymous commissions of powers which we had supposed the Constitution protected for us in perpetuity. To assure this rape of the Constitution, it is proposed to bring the judiciary also under the control of the chief magistrate, that these revolutionary measures may in due time be pronounced by the courts constitutional."

As said before, the only answer which Dr. Angell will get will be from the New Deal's epithet chorus. That is the New Dealers' customary method of confessing that they can't think of any real answer.

ECONOMY YEAR AFTER NEXT

President Roosevelt has directed federal department heads to cut expenditures in the fiscal year ending in 1939. So says the chief of the budget bureau; and he ought to know. For the 1937 budget fiscal year, ending the last day of this month, the treasury has a net deficit of $2,778,000,000. Mr. Roosevelt's revised budget estimates forecast a net deficit of $418,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938.

Those familiar with Rooseveltian estimates will look for the President's 1938 deficit to exceed his fond expectations. We suspect that Mr. Roosevelt, himself, will not be greatly surprised if the 1938 deficit jumps up quite a bit from his figure. There are always emergencies. Fiscal life with Mr. Roosevelt is just one emergency after another for these United States.

But Mr. Roosevelt has made up his mind to economize in the fiscal year of 1939. Of course, Mr. Roosevelt has made up his mind to economize in several previous fiscal years. Later, he invariably has made up his mind to spend more money. Perhaps history will repeat itself in the fiscal year of 1939.

If history does repeat itself and 1939 brings forth another sizable deficit, we may depend on this however: Mr. Roosevelt then will issue a warning to department heads and to Congress that he will expect strict economy in the fiscal year ending in 1940, or, at least, in that ending in 1941.

The Washington neutrality policy forbids the exportation of munitions to the Spanish Government, which this country "recognizes," but permits the exportation of munitions to Germany and Italy, which have invaded Spain.

Behind the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

HOLLYWOOD.—In case you notice something different about Olivia de Havilland in "The Great Garrick", the actress is three and one-half inches taller. Mervyn Le Roy decided she looked too tiny beside Brian Aherne's six-foot-two, and ordered special shoes made to give Olivia the added inches. Period costumes hide the device, but the star's ankles are so tired at the end of a day that she is ready to fall into bed as soon as she gets home.

Odd thing happened on the same picture. Lana Turner went bowling the other night with Leon Janney and he asked her to hold a diamond ring. She put it on her finger and they both forgot about it. A couple of evenings later, she returned the ring, but Janney was roused out of bed the following morning by the Warner Brothers studio.

Lana had worn the ring in close-ups and had to have it back for matching shots.

Now Janney is wondering if he ought not to send a bill to the studio.

Virginia Verrill, the feminine lead in the "Goldwyn Follies" is a mass of bruises from having a 210-pound wrestler (Sammy Stein) land in her lap at the matches the other night. The actress had to be carried out of the stadium by her escort and has been going through X-rays and visiting doctors ever since. Almost her entire body is black and blue.

Jenee Hall, eight-year-old youngster, who plays Joan Bennett's daughter in "I Met My Love Again", will wear clothes in the film that the star bought for her own daughter in Europe.

"BLACK ORCHIDS" by F. V. W. MASON

SYNOPSIS

Ian Gray, First Secretary to the Austrian Minister to Austria, is concerned over the infatuation of his colleague, Leonard Holt, for the notorious Countess Lolita von Waldeck. . . . But, when Ian meets the Countess at the Austrian Ministry, he, too, is fascinated by her beauty and cannot understand how one so lovely and naive could cause the tragedy and heart break with which she is credited. He asks her if she realizes that because of her, Leonard is jeopardizing his position and his engagement to Ilya Zichony, lovely daughter of a Hungarian Minister. For an instant Lolita's manner changed permitting Ian to glimpse a woman who by choice or under pressure of circumstances was thinking along practical lines. Almost at once the expression passed and Lolita was again the confused, innocent girl. Then mockingly she says, "I am going to devour your helpless little lamb to the last bit of wool." Much to Ian's surprise, she invites him to her cousin's residence the next afternoon, asking him to say nothing to Leonard. Try as he might, Leonard could not refuse. While they are talking, Colonel Sobeloff of the Bulgarian Royal Guards, breaks in upon them, flashing a revolver and crying, "Lolita has befooled her last lover." Ian tells him with a blow "You struck me, Monsieur Gray," the Colonel exclaims. "That means I shall have to kill you." "Don't be a fool," snaps Ian, as he turns on his heel and goes off.

CHAPTER VII

After bathing the bruised knuckles of his right hand and otherwise removing certain traces of the brief, but significant struggle, Ian Gray conducted a systematic search for the infatuated young man who had now placed him in an extremely difficult if not dangerous position. As the conviction grew that the dark-browed Colonel Sobeloff had meant every word of his threat, the invisible frown on Ian's brow grew deeper. He searched all the rooms filled with the brilliant and colorful throng of guests, but caught no glimpse of Leonard Holt's handsome head. As completely absent was the fragile blonde beauty of Countess Lolita von Waldeck; there was not a trace of her who had cast this bomb into the ordinary, tranquil routine of diplomatic life, though the jovial pink-faced Count von Bradensee was yet occupied in a mild flirtation with Senorita Martela.

He felt a sense of sharp alarm invade his being. It was unthinkable Leonard should so flout public opinion as to dash off with the intriguing Countess von Waldeck. Strange, disloyalty had never appeared in Leonard's make-up before, yet curiously enough at the same time he was beginning to understand. He was himself astounded, almost appalled, to find how much Lolita attracted him. He could not seem to forget the placid depths of her eyes, the quick reactions betrayed on her soft red lips.

Being essentially practical, Ian dismissed the matter from his mind as well as he might and took up the arduous task of being nice to a number of unimportant people in important positions.

As the evening dragged on he was vaguely troubled not to see the dark-visaged Bulgarian again. Obviously, Colonel Sobeloff had made his excuses to disappear quickly after that absurdly melodramatic recitave in the conservatory.

At last Baron von Saltzman's Versailles mantel clock chimed two o'clock and, by twos and threes the glittering assemblage commenced to break up. It was while he sought for change in anticipation of the taxi ride home that he was annoyed to discover the loss of his key ring of his apartment. He cursed beneath his breath on recalling that the conceivably and his innumerable family were off on a visit and so could not admit him as usual. They had given him the key to the downstairs and now he had lost it.

He stood a moment in thought, nodded an absent-minded goodnight to Captain d'Armonot who, discreetly triumphant, was squiring a vivacious Rumanian minor princess whose dark eyes hinted at bright moments in dark corners. As a solution it occurred to Ian that he might get a duplicate door key that customarily lay in his drawer at the Ministry. So saying, he borrowed a key to the offices from Peter Baskerville, an under secretary.

"Give it back to you in the morning," he smiled. "Damn stupid of me to lose mine."

"Oh, that's all right. But say, Leonard's in luck. We all lost something when the von Waldeck girl left us flat. By heaven she's a neat eye-fall!"

"Appears to be," and Ian nodded shortly, then made his way to the conservatory, but found no trace of the keys. He rather wondered if the Bulgarian had found them and planned, for instance, there was no light going on the second floor which immediately removed any possibilities of the charwoman being at work. On tiptoe he advanced, after turning up his overcoat collar lest the gleam of his white waistcoat and shirt front betray him.

All at once he heard a shrill squeaking and a tiny scuffle and smiled rather sheepishly in the gloom. A mouse after all. He relaxed and his hand closed over the door knob of the door of the main office. There was a switch inside.

A cloth, strong and warm, dropped over his head and he was jerked violently backwards.

if so—well, he wouldn't mind catching that troublesome fire-eater burglarizing his apartment. He hadn't much use for love sick fools who wanted to kill women that had enough sense to avoid them. Kill Lolita? The bloody swine!

Plunged in thoughts which were tinged with the darker shades of gray, Ian gave the address of the Ministry and settled absently back on the worn leather cushions of the pulling little cab. The night air was fresh and full of life, as only spring air can be, and the stars above the batteries of lazily smoking chimneys were very bright and friendly. As the cab sped through wide empty streets tenanted only by street cleaners and policemen, he felt picturing Lolita as he had first seen her. How unearthly beautiful she had looked framed by palm fronds and revealed by the soft moonlight!

He was shaken from his reverie by an agonized squeal of brakes and glanced up, startled to see the cream-colored facade of the Ministry looming above him.

"Warten sie," he instructed the sleepy walrus-moustached chauffeur and, after crossing the sidewalk, unlocked the front door. In the hall, the usual dim light was burning, making the familiar offices look huge and ghostly. He had begun to climb the stairs when he stiffened. On the floor above there had sounded a subdued noise. He smiled in the darkness—probably a mouse in a wastebasket or maybe a charwoman at work.

In the Ministry, as in most old houses built before Edison's day, the electrical system was bad.

He swung open the glass topped portal and reached for the light lever, but his hand never got there, for a cloth, strong and warm, dropped over his head and he was jerked violently backwards. He felt himself toppling hopelessly off balance and then he saw more lights than he had since Chateau Thierry. After that Ian Gray lay very still, with his crushed head flat beside him, for in falling his head had struck the corner of an extremely solid oak desk.

The first thing that impinged upon his returning senses was the fact that his head ached most abnormally, and second, that the scent of a very subtle and delicate perfume was in his nostrils. Ian, somewhat of a connoisseur in perfumes, identified the tantalizing, elusive scent as that of an expensive and uncommon variety known as Orchidees Noires, and was surprised to find that it arose from a man's black and white silk scarf that lay coiled like a shapeless snake across his rumpled shirt bosom.

"Well may I be hanged—he did a neat job! What a busy little evening we're having!"

With the sensations of a hitherto carefree wanderer who has become lost in a morass and who, in seeking to extricate himself, merely mires himself more securely, Ian pulled off the scented scarf, got up and snapped on the lights. To his amazement everything appeared quite as it should be. The desks were untouched and the safe was shut as usual.

160-LB CHAMPION TO BOX WILLIE COLLINS HERE

The present Middle Atlantic A. A. U. 160-pound champion, Herman Gowdy, who represents the Corsac A. C., will be among the top-notch fighters who will battle tonight in the weekly amateur boxing show conducted by the St. Ann's Athletic Association in its arena, Wood and Franklin streets. Ten bouts will be held with the sanction of the M. A. A. U.

Gowdy, who won the 160-pound diamond in the last tournament in Philadelphia, represented this district in the Golden Gloves in New York. He was eliminated in the semi-finals. Gowdy's foe will be Willie Collins, Sigma Theta. It was Collins who gave the champion his toughest battle in the Philadelphia tournament and the two youths have built up a great rivalry between themselves since then.

Gowdy is only one of the crowd-pleasers that matchmaker Sammy Moffo has lined up for the bouts. He has bouts for "Hokey" Leighton, Sammy Sindora, Tony Asterino, Joe Ferrara, Sylvester Purnell, Al Paris, Tally Sciarra and "Jupes" Zeffries, all fighters who wear the colors of local organizations.

It is Moffo's plan to use the Bristol mittmen as often as possible and each has compiled a record to be proud of. Leighton has captured six straight. Sindora has three under his belt without a defeat. Asterino won his only bout. Ferrara won his fourth consecutive bout in Wilmington Friday night. Purnell stopped William Wright in his last start. Paris also kayoed his foe last week. Sciarra beat Calvin Jenkins last Wednesday night and on Friday night fought a bang-up fight against Tony Aiello in Wilmington. Zeffries is on the comeback trail. He has fought three bouts and won them.

Matchmaker Moffo is attempting to secure Frankie Falcone for Zeffries. These two boys produce a sizzling match every time they meet and twice in the Italian Mutual Aid Hall had the fans sitting on the edge of their seats, rooting for either fighter and giving them both a wonderful ovation after their exhibitions.

Ferrara will fight Matty Arnold, Seymour; Asterino meets Jimmy Griscola, and Purnell fights Tommy Brown, Hackamaxon.

The return bout between Genero and Stietz is still on and the fans are expecting a bout on the order of the one they gave last week.

First bout goes on at 8.30 o'clock.

FARMERS TO OPPOSE PORT RICHMOND TONIGHT

Having secured a double victory last week-end, the Landreth Seeds will attempt to continue its winning streak tonight on its home diamond with the strong Port Richmond A. A. club, managed by "Jocko" Collins, the opposition. The first pitch is expected to sail over the plate at 6.15 p. m. sharp.

The team managed by Collins is setting an enviable record this season and is brushing aside all opposition. They captured the first half of the circuit in which they are a member. "Jocko" is well known here for the record he compiled while coaching the Northeast Catholic high school baseball team.

Manager Dave Landreth expects the same sort of pitching he received over the week-end from "Dutch" Henry and "Howie" Black, not to mention the game pitched by Al Carey when he blanked the North City Legion from the no-hit column yet was beaten, 3-1. This is the kind of pitching that will win the games for Landreth as the hitting has always been in the first class.

Landreth has also noticed that the leading batter of the contests are different ones every game and feels that none of his batters are in slump. "Frankie" Griggs is socking the apple hard and proved his ability at the plate in the eighth inning of the Riverton contest when he put two over the fence for home runs.

Just who will go on the mound tonight is undecided at the present time. Manager Landreth has the choice of Ashby, Hiesley or Carey. If a left-hander is needed it is most likely that Carey draws the assignment while Ashby seems a little favored over Hiesley in the event a right-hander will be sent to the peak.

LEGION JUNIORS TO PLAY MORRISVILLE AT EDGELY

The Bristol Legion Juniors will play the Morrisville Legion Juniors on the Edgely field tonight at 6.15 p. m. sharp. The Bristol Legion team is now in second place in the Bucks County League.

Perkasie is the only team to defeat Bristol, winning twice by the score of 3 to 1 and 4 to 1. Perkasie is in first place by one full game.

Bristol defeated Morrisville in Morrisville by the score of 11 to 6 in their first game.

Manager Hems is hoping for victory so as to keep close to the leader. Leinheiser or LaPolla will pitch with Tomlinson doing the catching.

Bristol will play Newtown on Friday night at Newtown.

The Quakertown game to have been played Monday evening was rained out. Will be played later.

Track Fireworks on Tap

By BURNLEY

Track and field events are over for the college teams, but the season is really under way for the outstanding collegians and club members. Right before us we have the National A. A. U. championships at Marquette Stadium, Milwaukee. Then comes the big Pan-American track and field carnival in Texas, July 15-18, in which a picked team of U. S. stars will compete against South America's best. About that time, New York will be staging the annual Labor Carnival track meet, which is expected to draw many leading athletes.

Then, the A. A. U. will select a team of champions and near champions to tour Japan, France and England this summer. Fifteen athletes will go to the Orient, while ten will go to France and ten will tour England.

Places on the Pan-American team and the touring squads are the prizes which the athletes will be shooting for at Milwaukee this week-end.

Fireworks galore can be confidently predicted on these two days preceding the Fourth, when America's greatest athletes will be out to explode as many records as possible.

TEAMS CHANGE PLAYERS' LISTS FOR SECOND HALF

At a meeting of the loop last night in the St. Ann's club-house with President Thomas Juno presiding, it was decided to cancel the games of July 5 until the later date.

The Story of the Constitutional Convention of 1787

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

UNIQUE IN GOVERNMENT

"Something new in history!" Thus have historians described a principle of government evolved by delegates to the Constitutional Convention which met in Independence Hall, Philadelphia, just a century and a half ago.

And it was exactly 150 years ago this week—from May 30 to June 5—that members of the Convention, sitting as a Committee of the Whole, first considered seriously that unique idea.

Briefly, it was the plan of our Federal form of Republic, combining a number of states, each with its own power, under a central government with separate executive, legislative and judicial authority—"a sovereign nation of many-sovereign states."

But this was only one of numerous ideas, more or less novel to the political thought of the day, that were introduced, weighed and sifted at that history-making meeting.

Informally its members approved also the now familiar idea of balanced powers among the Executive, the Legislative and the Judicial Departments of the National Government, which became so distinctive a feature of our American system.

Vigorously the majority of them fought to put the reins of authority in the hands of the people.

Firmly many insisted that both the Executive and the Legislative branches be held responsive to the public will.

Voices notable in American history were raised in the demand for popular rule and individual rights when the Committee considered methods of choosing members of the proposed Congress.

James Madison, "Father of the Constitution," announced that he "considered the popular election of one branch of the National Legislature as essential to every plan of free Government."

George Mason, of Virginia, declared it should be "the grand depository of the democratic principles of the Government," insisting that "we ought to attend to the rights of every class of the people."

James Wilson, of Pennsylvania, wished "authority to flow immediately from the legitimate source of all authority . . . the mind of the people at large."

Benjamin Franklin pointed out that an Assembly elected by the people "cannot easily become dangerous to liberty; they are the servants of the People, sent together to do the People's business."

With the distrust of royalty still fresh in their minds, the delegates were similarly eager to keep the proposed Executive responsive to the people.

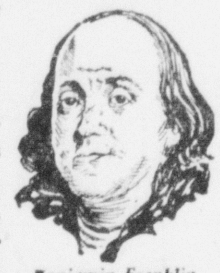

Governor Randolph, sponsor of the Virginia Plan, wanted to divide the Executive authority among three men, lest one assume kingly prerogatives. "The permanent temper of the people," he said, "is adverse to the very semblance of monarchy."

Franklin wanted the Executive to serve without pay. Many delegates were opposed to granting him the power to veto any acts of the Legislature.

Finally the Committee of the Whole approved a plan proposing that a single Executive be chosen by the elected Legislature, and that his veto could be overridden by a two-thirds vote of the Congress.

These and other democratic proposals were vigorously defended—and not infrequently opposed—during succeeding weeks, when debated in the formal sessions of the Convention. Many, of course, were changed—as later articles will show.

Next Week: Big States vs. Small.

LADIES' NIGHT TONIGHT

Tonight will be "Ladies' Night" at the Landreth ball park. Sunday, Manager Dave Landreth held Ladies' Day but was disappointed at the turnout but feels that threatening weather held back the members of the opposite sex.

So tonight as his club meets the Port Richmond A. A. nine, all women who go to the gate will be admitted free. This will be the final opportunity of the women to be admitted into the park without paying the admission fee.

A WINDOW IN THRUMS

A Tribute to Sir James Barrie and His Scottish Mother.

"A Window in Thrums"—and forth there looked
A wee Scots laddie, small and spare—
A lad whose eyes saw many things
Not writ upon the village square.

Who read deep love in lined cheeks,
Who heard clear bells through stormy weather.
Who saw the fairies when they danced
"Wee People" moving o'er the heather.

"A Window in Thrums"—'tis long ago
That small boy yearned to make her smile,
The mother whom he loved so well
Who left him for so long a while.

Who looks through that small window now
Will see the deathless paganant pass:
The Little Minister, poor Tommy,
And Elspeth tripping through the grass.

Peter? Ah Peter, loved of all!
Wendy, and all the others go
Into the Never, Never Land
While silvery, elfin trumpets blow.

"A Window in Thrums"—so long ago
A small face against it, eager pressed.
Now Sir James Barrie, old and grey,
Goes forth to quiet, honored rest.

"Her Jamie"—"Her wee, bitsy lad"—
She never lived to ken
The great man that he grew to be.
So mothers love their men.

Such faith she had, her window grew
Into a great man's shrine,
And through it's panes, forevermore,
A mother's love will shine.
